November 9, 2010 ( Mooresville, N.C.) - As the 2010 NASCAR Camping World Truck Series season draws to a close, Germain Racing is focused on something other than protecting their lead in the driver's championship standings. The team is focused on returning to victory lane at Phoenix International Raceway. Todd Bodine likes the Arizona one-mile circuit, and he'll be driving a winning chassis when he puts the No. 30 Germain.com Tundra on track.

"Phoenix International Raceway is a driver's track. There are different corners, different straightaways. You can move around, change your line and make the race truck do different things. We are taking our Darlington race-winner for our Germain.com Tundra and I'm really looking forward to getting on track at Phoenix," said Bodine, who saved the truck chassis, TRD-122, from the scrap heap when he wheeled it into victory lane in Darlington in August.

Mike Hillman Jr. says the days of thinking about recycling TRD-122 are long gone. He's confident this chassis is the right chassis to give Germain Racing a chance at returning to PIR's victory lane.

"The guys that work on this No. 30 Germain.com Tundra are really the reason we're taking this chassis to Phoenix. Todd drove a heck of a race for us at Darlington to get that win, but, it was the work that my guys put in behind the scenes, after hours, never giving up that kept this chassis in winning form," explained Hillman.

Hillman and the No. 30 team of Germain Racing tested this chassis before Martinsville, then raced it at the Virginia short-track, leading 83 of 206 laps before finishing 3rd.

"With what we learned testing at Little Rockingham and racing at Martinsville, I'm confident this Germain.com Tundra will be very competitive at Phoenix. This team has put in a lot of time to get the truck to where Todd likes driving it. The truck responds well to the changes we do in practice and in the race. I think this is the most excited I've been to take a truck to Phoenix in a couple seasons," said Hillman.

Bodine has raced six Truck Series races at Phoenix International Raceway. All have been behind the wheel of the No. 30 with Germain Racing and the pairing has produced one win, three top-five and four top-ten finishes. This Friday night, he'll compete in his 164th Truck Series race when he fires up the Germain.com Tundra for the 24th race of the 2010 season. Bodine has 725 NASCAR career starts to date.

Watch Bodine in the No. 30 Germain.com Tundra on Friday, November 12th, at Phoenix International Raceway. SPEED will cover Truck Series practice on Friday at 4:30 PM ET, and live later at 7:30 PM.
