Mooresville, N.C. (Oct. 27, 2011) - NASCAR Camping World Truck Series driver Brendan Gaughan loves traditions—and one he always tries to keep going is his ‘loathing’ of the short-track located in Martinsville, VA, that hosts two Truck Series events each season. Martinsville Speedway is a challenging circuit for many drivers. Gaughan actually runs fine there and enjoys racing for the Martinsville fans.

“My approach to Martinsville Speedway is the same every time I race there. I’m going to tell Mike Smith, the track PR director, that I hate Martinsville, just to keep the folks at the speedway happy with me. He’ll send me to the town early to do some pre-race promotion. I love the fans, I love the show that the track puts on and I love visiting the Martinsville community. This week, I’m meeting with the Boys and Girls Club of Martinsville and I’m excited about that. But, I hate Martinsville,” smiled Gaughan.

Gaughan has driven 11 Truck Series races at the .526-mile track. He's earned an average finish of 14.8 with three top-ten and three 11-place finishes. In the spring 250-lap event, Gaughan led the field and earned a ninth-place finish.

"I run better at Martinsville than I give myself credit for. What I've got to do is get my qualifying better. Starting 30th there just makes for a long day trying to come out of there with a top-ten finish. I want to start top-ten and finish top-ten," explained Gaughan.

Coming out of last week's event at Talladega, Gaughan says he isn't bearing any grudges heading into the short-track race at Martinsville.

"We actually kind of made new friendships at Talladega. We had the opportunity to race with some different drivers and it went well. So, for a change, there are really no grudges to be paid back at Martinsville. We are just looking forward to racing the South Point Hotel & Casino Tundra and getting another top finish there," said Gaughan.

See and hear Gaughan and the No. 62 South Point Hotel & Casino Tundra competing in the Kroger 200 from Martinsville Speedway live on SPEED, MRN Radio and Sirius-XM NASCAR Radio, channel 90. SPEED pre-race coverage begins at 1:30 PM ET; MRN Radio broadcasts starting at 1:45 PM on Saturday, October 29. Practice is live on SPEED, Friday at 2 PM, with qualifying live Saturday, 10:40 AM.
